The Internet Infrastructure Coalition (i2Coalition) Issues Statement On FCC December Net Neutrality Vote

Washington DC; November 21st, 2017 - The i2Coalition has issued a statement calling on FCC commissioners to vote no on the December 14th net neutrality vote, which was announced earlier today. The i2Coalition would also like to encourage peer organizations, businesses, and individual citizens to contact the FCC and do the same. The statement, as well as info for contacting FCC commissioners, has been published on the i2Coalition website.

“i2Coalition companies build the infrastructure of the Internet that sit above the telecommunications layer,” said i2Coalition Executive Director Christian Dawson. “This vote is being touted by some as something that will help the ecosystem of Internet businesses. Nothing can be further than the truth. This vote will negatively impact small and medium-sized Internet business, and has the potential to decrease jobs and economic growth system-wide, to the benefit of a very few large organization.”

i2Coalition will be actively working to raise awareness of the upcoming vote, and working hard to encourage Internet businesses to contact commissioners to vote no.
