The Trojman Corporation to distribute Reuters Newsfilm for Education by Screenocean for North American Libraries

Toronto— December 13th, 2021 Noon EST—

The Trojman Corporation has secured an exclusive agreement with Screenocean to distribute the Reuters Archive to academic institutions across Canada and the United States

“We are excited to provide a fixed cost solution for libraries that want to support documentary and media production programs” said Salvy Trojman, “We want to give the next generation of film makers the best resources to learn their craft”.

“We are thrilled to provide a solution for the education market” said Ali Blake, Managing Director for Screenocean. “Requests from students to license content for productions are frequent but the cost is prohibitive. We now have a scalable solution that includes all the necessary requirements to be a library vendor. Authentication, usage statistics and citation information are built into the Screenocean platform”

“Screenocean has been a trusted source for me” said Claire McNabb (Cineflix Productions Inc.), who has over 140 credits to her name. “Access to Screenocean means that students will understand how to use archival footage before they start working in the industry”

Trials and pricing are now available. Please visit <https://www.trojman.ca/screenocean> for more information.
